Independence Day Message from COMNAVBASE

Two hundred twenty eight years ago our founding fathers declared themselves free from tyranny as they fought for independence and freedom. Today, we in Guantanamo along with thousands of uniformed servicemen and women, working in concert with law enforcement and security agencies, vigilantly preserve that freedom for our loved ones and for other citizens of more than 120 countries around the world.

We continue to promote our values and ideals focused on defeating terrorism and those who support it, with the overwhelming support and resolve of the American people. Our efforts take many forms: direct action, peacekeeping, humanitarian assistance, detention and interrogation, and peacetime engagement. Collectively, these endeavors contribute immeasurably to our success. I applaud each of you for your commitment toward protecting freedom for current and future generations.

During this Fourth of July holiday, take a moment to reflect on the sacrifice and significance of our day of Independence. Let this freedom set the example and encourage others to stay true to their hopes and dreams, as those who went before us.

God bless you, your families and God bless the United States of America.

Annual Report on Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay Drinking Water Online

The annual Consumer Confidence Report on the quality of water delivered by the U. S. Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay can be read online at www.nsgtmo.navy.mil/Gazette.htm. Click on the Water Report link.

A requirement for this report was brought about in 1996 when Congress amended the Safe Drinking Water Act. It added a provision requiring all community water systems to deliver a brief annual water quality report to their customers. Included in this report is pertinent information about the source of GTMO's water, any contaminants detected and possible sources of contaminants for the calendar year 2003.

Crimebusters Prepare for National Night Out

"National Night Out" (NNO), a unique crime and drug prevention event that is billed nationwide as "America's Night Out Against Crime," is Tuesday, August 3. Here in GTMO, the community is invited to come together at Cooper Field starting at 5 p.m.

National Night Out is designed to:

- ♦ Heighten crime, drug and violence prevention awareness;
- ♦ Generate support for, and participation in, local anti-crime programs;
- ♦ Strengthen neighborhood spirit and police-community partnerships;
- ♦ Send a message to criminals letting them know that neighborhoods are organized and fighting back.

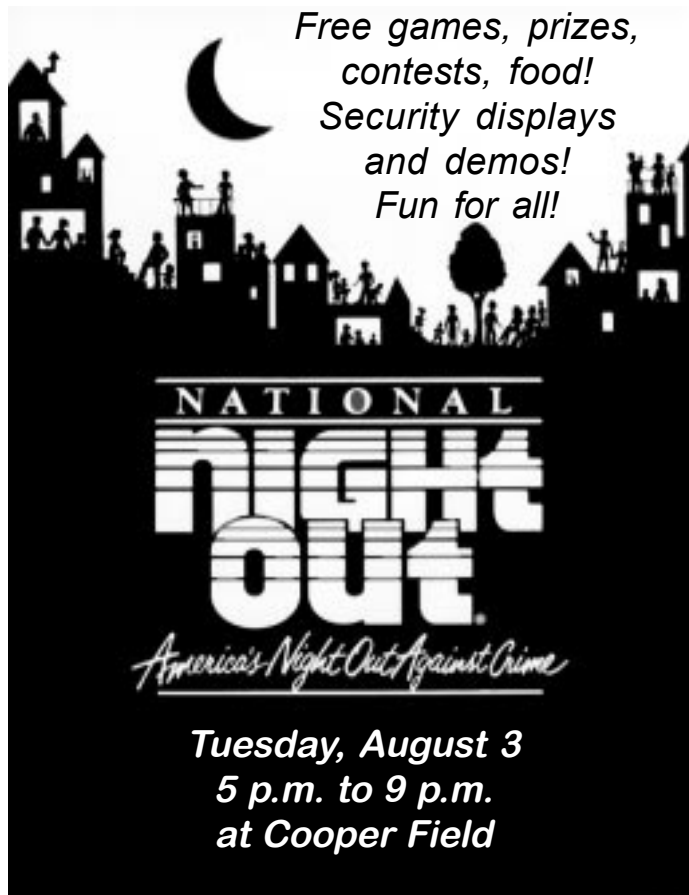

The annual event, sponsored by the Crimebusters volunteer organization in the Naval Station Security Department, is free and open to all base residents. This year's event includes great food, raffle prizes, game booths, a bouncer, children's fingerprinting, a tug-o-war contest, static displays of the various security vehicles and more.

According to ABF1 Patricia Peterson, Crimebusters president, "National Night Out is offered each year to the GTMO community as a promotion for crime prevention. It's an opportunity for us [security personnel] to give back to the community and foster an atmosphere of good will between local law enforcement and base residents in a fun, friendly, family-oriented environment."

"This gives me the opportunity to give back to my community. A chance to celebrate safe neighborhoods and police and

Marines Recreate Historic Tarawa Battle

Marines and Sailors of 1st Fleet Antiterrorism Security Team Company (FAST), 7th Platoon, stormed the beaches of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, recently in a reenactment of the Second Marine Division's historic assault of Betio Island, Tarawa Atoll in November 1943.

"Tarawa Day" was a great opportunity for Marines of 1st FAST, 7th Platoon to get in touch with their warrior heritage. The Betio Island of Tarawa Atoll had been transformed into the most heavily fortified base, yard-for-yard, of any in the Pacific. When the 2nd Marine Division headed for the invasion beaches on Nov. 20, 1943, predictions for the upcoming battle ran from cakewalk to death trap. The battle was fought bravely by the Marines, Sailors and Coast Guardsmen in what was casualty for casualty the bloodiest three days in the Pacific. The battle lasted three days.

Prior to the exercise, Fire Team leaders from 7th Platoon, 1st FAST were each given an assignment to research a certain portion of the battle and present a brief to the Marines.

The presenters of the Japanese and American tactics brief shared an interesting quote by Japanese Rear Adm. Keiji Shibasaki, commander, 3rd Special Base Force, who haughtily predicted, "A million men cannot take Tarawa in 100 years." It took about 4,000 Marines and Sailors three days.

"I think the quote by Rear Adm. Shibasaki, the Japanese commander impressed the men the most, the Marines proved him wrong by a factor of 1000 which is so motivating to our Marines," said Cpl. Raymond Harrison, 3rd Squad 1st Team Leader.

In the wee hours of the morning, Capt. Hunter Rawlings gave team leaders a simple order and landing plan, similar to the one given before the actual Tarawa invasion. Rawlings explained that in those days there were few maps for most of the commanders, and the average private first class didn't really have a grasp of the big picture, but rather what was to happen on his piece of the beach.

The Marines mustered by the landing craft, an old World War II-era "Mike" boat here, similar to the Higgins Boats used by the Marines in their amphibious landings on Tarawa. Rawlings read from the diaries of two Marines, a Private First Class and a Lieutenant, two very different views of the battlefield, but remarkably similar in their expression of honor, courage, fear and hope of doing a good job and not letting their fellow Marines down.

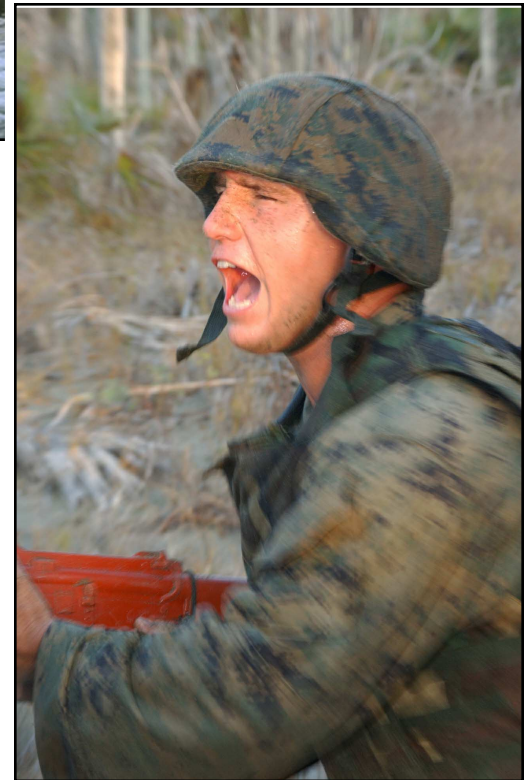

As dawn broke, the Marines approached the landing site and the ramp went down with a splash, drenching the lead Marines with cold salt water. Instantly the Marines saw and heard ferocious gunfire from the tree line. They were being hit on all flanks from machine guns and rifles firing blanks, the muzzle flashes told them many in the front would have been hit. Encouraged and ready, the Marines let out a battle cry and waded ashore in water up to their necks, rifles above their heads.

"The landing gave me such a respect for what those Marines gave. The whole event gave me the idea of the extremes those Marines endured - no sleep, little in the way of food or water. It was intense, and I loved every second of it," said Lance Cpl. John Steele, rifleman, 3rd Squad of the landing.

The squads assaulted the beach in three waves; 1st squad left, 2nd squad in the middle and 3rd squad right, exactly as on Tarawa. They had nine grueling stations in round-robin style with activities designed to be similar to the Tarawa beach landings. The Marines spent four hours running casualties up and down the beach into the water to evacuate wounded as waves crashed over them. They low crawled ammo out of the crashing surf and they fought savagely at the sparring stations demonstrating their skills learned in Marine Corps Martial Arts, to simulate the hand-to-hand fighting the under-supplied Marines endured.

“It was the most draining experience I have ever endured in the Corps. I felt so close to my team; we all had to work together. This is why I joined the Corps, to learn to fight with a tight group of brothers. We assisted every man through because we knew what would have been the price of failure. I can see how the warriors of those days must have felt the spirit of comradeship like we did,” said Pfc. Jeffrey MacGregor.

community partnerships, citizens, law enforcement agencies, community groups, businesses, and youth organizations all come together," said SK2 Dennis Hathorn, Crimebusters member. "In order for a driver to go anywhere one has to have a vehicle. National Night Out is a popular and effective vehicle for heightening awareness, enhancing police-community relations, and bolstering volunteer morale.

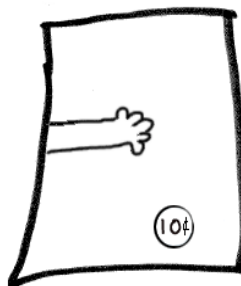

Peterson went on to explain that Crimebusters raises money throughout the year in support of the event in order to make it the best that it can be. Some upcoming events include a car wash, dunk tank and the Iguana Terrace water slide. Watch the Gazette and Channel 4 for dates and times.

There is also a call going out to all departments, commands and individuals on base interested in participating in the tug-o-war contest. Contact Peterson at 3730 or 2103 or e-mail n702b29@usnbgmtmo.navy.mil.

Crimebusters is on a volunteer hunt, as well. Individuals are needed to help operate the game booths, set-up and clean-up. The point of contact is Peterson.

If your organization is interested in setting up their own static display or demonstration during NNO, contact

Peterson if you can lend a hand.

Finally, the Crimbusters organization would like to congratulate Hannah Kimball, a student at W.T. Sampson Elementary School, on her winning logo/theme design, "Don't Be a Mime - Drop a Dime on Crime." Kimball will receive a $50 savings bond.

What is an Ombudsman?

Selected by the commanding officer (CO), your Navy Family Ombudsman (for Navy families) is a spouse of a member of the command who voluntarily serves as the official liaison between the command and its families. The Ombudsman is a vital resource to assist the command in discharging the CO's responsibilities for the morale and welfare of the command's families.

Your Ombudsman

- ♦ Works directly under the CO's guidance
- ♦ Is selected on the basis of their maturity, social skills, willingness to help, and availability to serve
- ♦ Receives Navy Personnel Command standardized formal training
- ♦ Tells family members about the command's policies and wishes
- ♦ Tells the command of the families' needs and concerns
- ♦ Is friendly and approachable and is required by Federal law to keep confidences

- ♦ Serves as a source of important information and referral
- ♦ Is always ready to help in case of an emergency
- ♦ Serves at all times, at all types of commands- shore, sea, medical, air, surface, subs, etc.

The Ombudsman is the link between the command and the Navy family. This is especially true in deploying commands, where the Ombudsman is the primary point of contact between the families at home and the command during deployment. As a spouse, it's important to get acquainted with your local Ombudsman. The Ombudsman is not a counselor or a social worker, but can show you the direct route toward finding solutions by helping you get the assistance you need.

To visit the official Ombudsman website, go to: www.persnet.navy.mil/pers66/ombudsman1/index.htm.

Meet Tee Hovell & Amanda McFarland - Your Hospital Ombudsmen

Kristie Hovell, or "Tee" for short, is one of the Ombudsmen at U.S. Naval Hospital Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

"The biggest reason I chose to accept this appointment is because of my first-hand experiences being a military spouse," said Hovell.

"My husband, Stan Hovell, a nurse on the ward, was an E-5 stationed at Naval Air Station North Island when we first met. Since then, we've seen many changes from making Chief Petty Officer and to his commissioning. Often times, he would be called away with an explanation riddled with acronyms, and I wished then I had known about the Ombudsman program. I want to be your interpreter. I want to be your direct liaison with the Commanding Officer."

You can contact Hovell at 7606 or e-mail her at kristie.a.hovell@gtmo.med.navy.mil

Amanda McFarland serves as a hospital Ombudsman, along with Kristie Hovell.

"The main reason I wanted to be an Ombudsman is because I wanted to help the dependents in utilizing and understanding all the programs that the military has to offer, she said. "There are a lot of programs that many don't know about. This program maybe one of them. I would like to be your direct liaison with the Hospital Command."

You can reach McFarland at 5508 or 7-2074. Her e-mail address is amanda.a.mcfarland@gtmo.med.navy.mil."

A Letter From Your Post Office

Dear Customer,

Today's topic will cover one of the special services called insurance. Many customers request insurance on their packages, but may not be aware of the regulations to receive it or all the many things insurance covers.

PS Form 3813P is the blue numbered insurance form, and PS Form 3813 is the green unnumbered insurance form. The blue form is for boxes insured for $51 and above. The green forms are for boxes insured for $50 and under. The highest amount you can insure a box is $5,000. The amount insured covers lost, rifled or damaged articles.

If you want to insure an item, you need to tell the postal clerk and also make sure your box is properly packaged. Your box should not rattle. You can insure first class mail, including priority, and you can insure your standard mail, too. The postal clerk will provide the forms at the counter and fill them out when you request insurance. Please be sure to prepare your box properly, and we'll take care of the rest.
